

Now 15 Cents
NEW ENGLAND MAGAZINE

MAY

15 Cents

Made in America best in the World

Clicquot Club
EXTRA DRY
GINGER ALE

GUARANTEED TO COMPLY WITH ALL
PURE FOOD LAWS OF THE U. S. A.
MANUFACTURED BY
The Clicquot Club Co.
MILLIS, MASS.

Clicquot Club
Ginger Ale

There is a neap of difference in ginger ales, and the difference between poor and perfect belongs to you if you order Clicquot Club Ginger Ale. Of pure water, ginger and sugar it is always the same, delicious and wholesome.

Non-astringent and without preservatives.

We also make

Birch Beer Sarsaparilla Blood Orange Root Beer Lemon Soda

———— All of "Clicquot" quality ————

CLICQUOT CLUB CO. . . . Millis, Mass., U. S. A.

CRYSTAL
Domino
SUGAR

5lb Sealed Boxes Only! • Best Sugar for Tea and Coffee! • By Grocers Everywhere!

1758

1909

Contents for May

Beautiful New England	257
Frontispiece. "After the Bath" From the painting by Joaquin Sorolla
The Woman's Congressional Club	MRS. HENRY T. RAINEY 265
In and Out of New Bay	LUCY INGRAM TOPLIFF 272
With illustrations by C. Scott White
To a Brown Thrush. A Poem	ANNA PERLSIUS CHANDLER 281
The Grapes of Tantalus	RUTH DAME COOLIDGE 282
Colonial Dames. A Poem	WILLIAM ADDISON HOUGHTON 289
The Wax Works at Warsaw. A Story	BEN BLOW 290
Illustrations by Dan Sayre Groesbeck
Consummation. A Poem	GERTRUDE BROOKE HAMILTON 297
Great Fights in Early New England History
III. The Battle of Bloody Brook
Bellows Falls	H. ADDINGTON BRUCE 298
Our Birds	CHARLES M. ROCKWOOD 306
Bobby. A Story	L. W. BROWNELL 319
The Minor Arts	FRANK H. SWEET 327
Into Mine Own. A Poem	JOHN LAFARGE 330
Miss Yin Yang, of Shanghai. A Story	ROBERT FROST 338
A Minute. A Poem	DAISY E. M. F. CAMPBELL 339
Glen Noble. Chapter XVI	BENJAMIN REYNOLDS BULKELEY 344
Maine's Earliest Open Waters	WINSLOW HALL 345
Song. A Poem	CHARLES EVERETT BEANE 353
A Word About the Weather	BETH BRADFORD GILCHRIST 362
Tarry at Home Travel — 1890	EDWARD E. HALE, D.D. 370
A "Plain Farmer's" View of the Forestry Question	368
In New England	376

NEW ENGLAND MAGAZINE

Entered at Boston Post Office as second-class matter. Copyright 1909, by New England Magazine Co.
$1.50 a Year Foreign Postage, seventy-five cents additional 15 Cents a Number

NEW ENGLAND MAGAZINE COMPANY, Publishers

Bertrand L. Chapman, President

Charles Everett Beane, Editor

294 Washington Street, Boston, Massachusetts

reappears in the copy." That superiority of the hand-made work for which the pattern is only used, as a manner of doing something well, is to be seen near here in Trinity where the old windows sent out from English Boston have at once that something of life, that something of what makes the past interesting, which, of course, has to be wanting in the church itself, a modern Boston church. Mr. Hardy could not have chosen a better example than the traceried window. Rodin, the sculptor, would tell us that the sculpture should meet the future by being in advance irregular, fluctuating, as it will be later when weathered. So he would say that it should have at the beginning the look of having weathered already, of meeting joyously the sun and rain and air and the changes of line, it being something more than the mere pattern of a project or the map of a country.

INTO MINE OWN

By ROBERT FROST

One of my wishes is that those dark trees,
So old and firm they scarcely show the breeze,
Were not, as 'twere, the merest mask of gloom,
But stretched away unto the edge of doom.

I should not be deterred, but that some day
Into their vastness I should steal away,
Fearless of ever finding open land
Or highway where the slow wheels pour the sand.

I do not see why I should e'er turn back,
Or those should not set forth upon my track
To overtake me, those who miss me here
And long to know if still I hold them dear.

They would not find me changed from him they knew —
Only more sure of all I thought was true.

MISS YIN YANG, OF SHANGHAI*

By DAISY E. M. F. CAMPBELL

ROBERT HESSELCROFT appeared neither dignified nor comfortable. Perched upon a revolving chair, and with corrugated brow and stiffly arched index finger, he was engaged in a staccato exercise upon that most feminine of machines in its complexity, a typewriter.

His sojourn in Shanghai had covered two weeks and he was occupied in reporting progress to the New York office. The day previous he searched for and found a stenographer who quite fluently assured him that he "takee allee kind dictation." This proved to be true, but Chan Lo's efforts to dispose of the squirming hieroglyphics after their capture would have been amusing had Hesselcroft's sense of humor been able to pass the bounds of exasperation. In justification of some of the more glaring blunders relating to an electric enterprise, the queue-adorned one placidly remarked:

"'Lectlicity velly new dis countly; no know him muchee."

Profiting by experience, Hesselcroft purchased a machine and determined to write his own letters until he might procure a typist, native or otherwise.

"If I write my letters in longhand, even a moon-faced Chinaman ought to be able to copy them," thought he.

Examining the machine carefully, he commenced the report to his superior in New York. "Shanghai," followed by the date, was a work of art. Greatly elated, Hesselcroft banged the machine down and proceeded to write his august manager's name and address. Carefully placing an interrogation mark after "Mngr?" instead of the customary period, he lifted the carriage with airy grace, and found to his wrath that he had neglected to space for the line below. By this lapse from duty "Mngr." and "Shanghai" had become inextricably intermingled on the same line.

"Oh, hang it!" ejaculated Hesselcroft, "I didn't come over here to punch a typewriter. Wish they would send a stenographer from home."

Placing a fresh sheet of paper in the machine, he was interrupted by a tap at the door. "Come in," he called in American fashion. No one accepting the invitation, he rather impatiently strode to the door, and opening it, discovered a young Chinese girl in brilliant native costume, one small hand grasping a huge paper umbrella.

"What can I do for you?" inquired Hesselcroft.

"You want typer lady?" asked the small one.

"Why—I don't know," replied he doubtfully, her butterfly appearance not inspiring him with confidence in her skill as a "typer." "Can you run a Remington?"

"Yeh, me lun Lemington," she replied nonchalantly.

"Very well; we'll try it for a few days and see how everything goes."

"All lite," she acquiesced cheerfully and seated herself upon the recently vacated chair with a funny little air of possession.

"Now, Miss ——," began Hesselcroft, then remembered that he had not asked her name. "What am I to call you," inquired he.

"My name Yin," she replied.

"Miss Yin?" he said interrogatively.

"No, Yang,"—smiling mischievously.

"Oh. Miss Yinyang I'll call you, then."

"No, no," said she laughing. "Yin my flont name. Wha' you' name?"

"Robert Hesselcroft," she repeated after him, then added, with a little emphatic nod, "Velly plitty name."

Hesselcroft's thoughts for a moment reverted to the lovely damsel in far-away Boston, with whom he had unsuccessful-

IT USED TO BE SAID

that a small leak would in time sink the greatest ships—that was in the days of old wooden sailing vessels—before the airtight compartments were installed. It used to be said that

There Was No Money In Dairying

that was in the days of cream separating by the slow old gravity method.

Times and methods are ever changing on both land and sea. The leaks that would once sink great ships, and the ancient methods that once made dairying at a profit impossible, are now over.

For the past seventeen years, or since the

UNITED STATES Cream Separator

has been on the market, you hear less of this complaint.

But why?

Because the U. S. saves the last particle of cream.

With any other skimming method a large amount of the cream is lost.

Its immense savings of cream alone would convince any dairyman that a U. S. Separator was absolutely necessary, but here are many other great advantages.

The bowl is very simple, small, compact and complete; easily washed and thoroughly sanitary. The World's Record Winner for closest skimming.

Other advantages as waist low supply can, ease of operation, thorough lubrication, reversible crank, enclosed gearing, all lend to make the U. S. Separator the greatest dividend payer a dairyman can invest in.

More particulars are found in Catalog No. 127. Write for it. We will send it anywhere. Any U. S. selling Agent will be pleased to let you try one in your dairy. See him.

VERMONT FARM MACHINE COMPANY

Bellows Falls, Vermont, U.S.A.